

DOUGLAS MEMORIAL WOODS CONSERVATION AREA

Douglas Memorial Woods is a 22-acre parcel of woods and wetlands donated by Susan Fleming in memory of her parents, Maynard and Marjorie Fleming Douglas, who owned and farmed this and adjacent parcels. With the help of Kennebunk Savings Bank and Eliot residents, a 3/4 mile public trail was constructed on this land in 2006. Essentially flat, the trail meanders through a variety of habitats and vegetative communities. The dark, shadowy pine forest is sometimes gloomy and foreboding, at other times it is a cool and calm oasis. Red maples are bright in the early fall. Small streams meander through the property and the wetlands are extensive during wet seasons. Bridges and bog bridging have been installed to allow passage at all times, and walkers will find a variety of experiences in this quiet spot, dependent on the time of day, the season, and the weather.

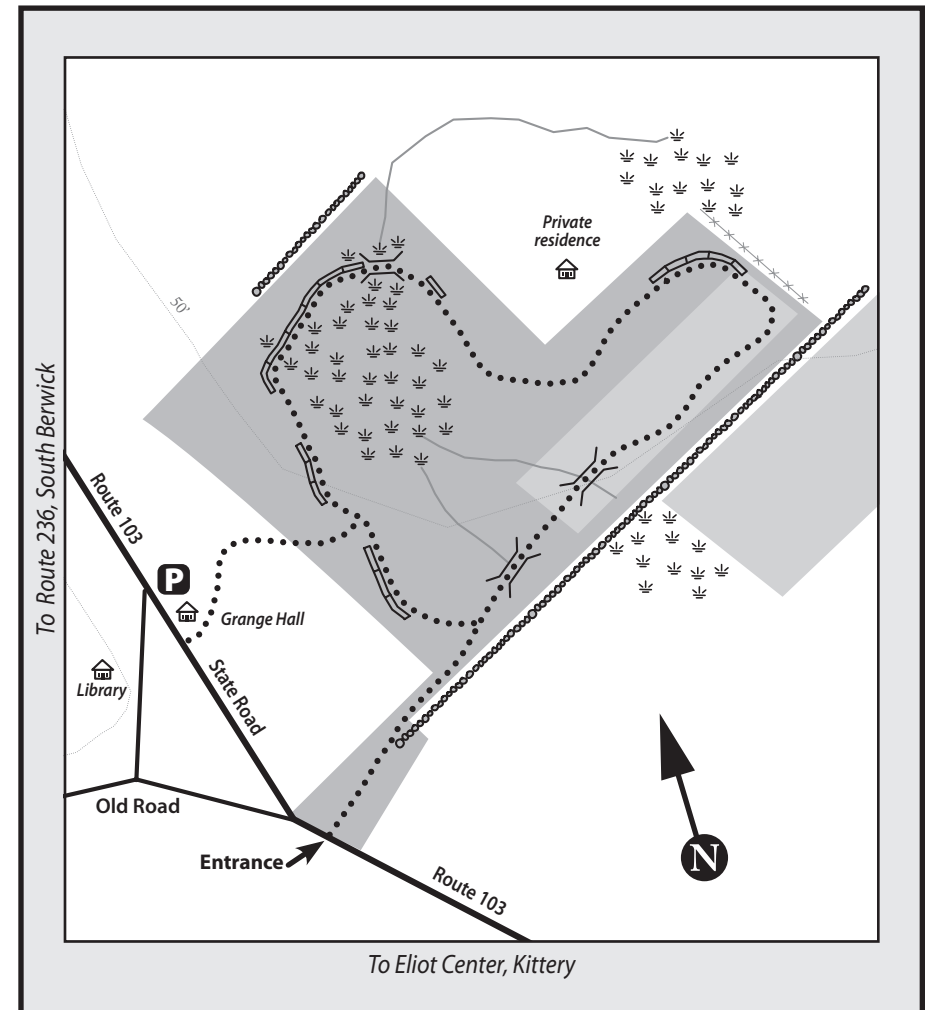

Directions: The trailhead is located at the intersection of Old Road with State Road (Route 103) in the village of Eliot, near the Fogg Memorial Library. The John F. Hill Grange has kindly allowed parking for users of the trail at their Grange Hall at 1333 State Road. Another trail leads into the Woods from the other side of the Grange.
