

Planning and Facilitating Collaborative Meetings Training

June 17 – 18, 2019

Schoodic Institute at Acadia National Park, Winter Harbor, Maine

Register by June 3:

<https://pfcmschoodic.eventbrite.com>

June 20-21, 2019

Wells National Estuarine Research Reserve, Wells Maine

Register by June 13:

<https://pfcmwells.eventbrite.com>

Harness the Power of the Solstice to Improve the Impact of Your Work on the Coast of Maine!
The Wells National Estuarine Research Reserve, the Schoodic Institute at Acadia National Park and the Maine Coastal Program are partnering to bring this two-day NOAA training to the coast of Maine. Learn how to plan and facilitate collaborative meetings that get results for coastal communities and the natural environments that support them. Participants working at every level to effectively engage stakeholders in their work will benefit from this training. FMI visit this link.

During this workshop, you will become a better facilitator by learning how to:

- Determine if a collaborative process is appropriate
- Select people with the skill sets needed to fill each meeting role
- Use appropriate process tools and techniques to address meeting objectives
- Enhance facilitation skills with practice using simple tools
- Manage conflict in meetings through a greater understanding of group dynamics
- Identify disruptive behaviors in group processes and practice strategies to deal with them

A limited number of scholarships are available to cover lodging costs at Schoodic Institute. For more information about scholarships or to learn more about the training contact Emily Greene emily@wellsnerr.org or Chris Feurt cfeurt@wellsnerr.org 207-646-1555 x 111, at the Wells Reserve.

Thanks to our co-sponsors: Casco Bay Estuary Program, Gulf of Maine Research Institute, Hancock County Soil and Water Conservation District, Island Institute, Maine Sea Grant, Piscataqua Region Estuary Partnership, and Southern Maine Planning and Development Commission.